Aid Agencies Welcome Seanad Support for Overseas Aid

Debate in Seanad reveals cross-party support for call to stop cutting aid programme

Commenting on yesterday's [20 May] debate in Seanad Éireann, Dóchas, the umbrella group of development NGOs, welcomed Senators' support for Ireland's overseas aid programme.

The debate took place following the publication earlier this month of an external review of Irish aid, undertaken by the OECD. That report showed that aid from Ireland is "world class", but that it had been damaged by the government's budget cuts.

Fianna Fáil Senators had tabled a motion congratulating the government with the OECD report's findings.

"We are delighted to see the extent of political support for Ireland's overseas aid programme, and we note that this support ranges across all parties and groups represented in the Seanad" said Hans Zomer, spokesman of Dóchas.

"The Seanad has given a very clear signal to the government that it does not want to see further cuts to Ireland's overseas aid. All speakers in the debate highlighted that aid from Ireland is first class, and is saving countless lives every day. Moreover, Senators said that our aid programme should be a source of national pride, and not be an easy target for government cuts" continued Zomer.

The OECD review of Irish aid was launched on 7 May. Irish aid agencies have pointed out that the report demonstrates that Ireland's aid has clear and tangible benefits for poor people in the world's poorest countries, as well as for Ireland itself – Ireland has become a world leader in the fight against hunger and AIDS, and our aid programme has given Ireland a degree of influence well beyond what other countries of similar size enjoy.

"The government's strategy to fight the recession is based on attempts to repair our damaged international reputation as a country that is 'open for business'. Yet, by cutting the aid budget, our government is deliberately and willfully damaging our reputation as a country that keeps its promises" said Hans Zomer of Dóchas.

"We welcome that Seanad Éireann has echoed our call on the government to make sure that there will be no further cuts to the aid budget, and to present a clear plan on how we are going to keep our promise to help make poverty history," said Mr. Zomer.

About the aid cuts

- At the UN Millennium Review Summit in 2005, the Taoiseach Bertie Ahern committed Ireland to reaching the UN target for spending 0.7% of our GNP on overseas aid in 2012.
- The government set interim targets "against which our progress towards the target can be measured". The interim target set for 2010, next year, is 0.6% of GNI.
- Due to massive and unprecedented cuts to the budget, Ireland's aid expenditure for 2009 is predicted to fall well short of the target and reach only 0.48% of GNI.
- The Irish overseas aid budget has been cut by €45 million in July 2008, by another €15 million in October, by €95 million in February this year and by a further €100 million in April 2009.
- The cuts in 2009 alone represent 22% of the total aid budget for the year; well in excess of the reduction in national income, which is estimated to be around 8-10%.
